Mineral Group Demonstration

Ronald Miller gave a lecture and full demonstration on the centrifugal casting of jewelry objects before the Tourmaline Gem and Mineral Society and guests at Porter Park Clubhouse Sunday night. Mr. Miller is an instructor of lapidary work at the Education Center.

This method is one by which small natural objects, such as leaves, flowers or seed pods, may be reproduced in gold or silver and used for earrings, pins or other pieces of jewelry. Non-perishable objects may also be duplicated. Mr. Miller brought with him a portable furnace, a centrifugal caster, and all materials with which to make a complete demonstration.

In appreciation of their splendid leadership, rock hammers engraved with names and dates of presidency, were presented to past presidents Harold W. B. Baker and Ralph Potter.

New committee chairmen are F. Herbert Sharp, program; Arthur Gray, field trip; John Bogan, membership; Lucille Kennedy, publicity.

COMMENDS THEATRE

John van Gilse, of the Lemon Grove Theatre, has received a letter of appreciation from the San Diego USO Advisary Council commending him for his generous gift of free tickets for men in uniform. This co-operation assures the service personnel of the sincere community goodwill toward them as well as giving them good entertainment.

Guest from India Speaks at Church

Miss Getsie Samuel, president of St. Christopher's Training School in Madras, South India, gave the address at the morning services at the Congregational church on Sunday.

Miss Samuel is taking her master's degree at U.S.C. and will leave in February, to return to India by June when the school term begins. April and May are their hot months there and the people go to the hills then for a vacation.

Miss Samuel has been head of another girl's school there for 12 years and has prepared a great many teachers to work among the people of India already. The theme of her address here last Sunday was the story of the final unification of all protestant churches in India, under the name of "United Church of South India." Miss Samuel has been greatly instrumental in bringing literacy to the people of India. Soon after being placed in charge of the training school, she announced that since this school was a training school for teachers, there should be no person who couldn't sign his own name, even among the cooks and custodians. No employee could get his next check without signing his name for it and it was up to the girls to teach these workers to write. Can you imagine the thrill of signing your own name for the first time?

Miss Samuel brought with her the thanks and appreciation of the people of India for the help and encouragement the United States has given them, and she urges teachers and young people to go to India as exchange students and teachers to further our mutual understanding and respect.

Miss Samuel was the guest of Miss Gertrude Scovel and Mrs. Hannah Abbott over the weekend.

Winter Symphony Season Opens

The 1951-52 season of the San Diego Philharmonic orchestra, San Diego's own winter symphony, will open Sunday at 8:30 p. m. in the Russ Auditorium, with Dr. Leslie Hodge, conducting for the second year.

The all-orchestra program will feature Dr. Hodge's own transcription of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," with piano accompaniment by Florence Stevenson, widely-known local pianist. The organ score will be played by Edward G. Borgens on the Baldwin organ.

Tickets for the season or for the single performance are available at the S. D. Philharmonic box office at Borgens Music Company, 724 Broadway.

"In my transcription of the 'pictures,' I have used lots of percussion and unusual brass effects in order to retain the barbaric spirit of the original," said Dr. Hodge.

Because of the close association between the church music and the Moussorgsky's 'Pictures,' several young members of the choir of the local Greek Orthodox church in native costumes will greet the "first nighters" as hostesses in the foyer of the Russ.

Other selections on the premiere program include; the Prelude to "Mastersingers of Nuremberg," and Beethoven's immortal Fifth Symphony.

The third event of the Philharmonic's Master series Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, will be presented in matinee and evening performances on Sunday, December 9. Tickets also at 724 Broadway.

Transportation is Big Business in School District

Approximately 1800 school children travel to and from school each day by bus in the Lemon Grove School District. This includes students from the kindergarten through the eighth grade. It has always been the policy of school officials here to provide transportation to students whenever possible, and at present about 25% of these students who travel by bus live within the three-fourth mile limit, set by State law, from the schools which they attend.

This policy will be continued at present by the school district, even though the State does not assist in payment for the cost of transportation for this 25% who travel each day. This temporary arrangement has been agreed upon for several reasons.

At this time many children attend schoo's some distance from their homes because the classes would be very overcrowded and not balanced if they were enrolled at schools nearer home. This situation will of course be remedied when the new additions and new school now under construction are completed in early Spring. Many children who now travel by bus will then be within easy walking distance of their classes.

It is also felt, under present conditions, that traffic presents too many hazards for traveling on foot on crowded highways. Convenient routes, whenever possible, will be set up for those who walk to school when the new classrooms are opened.

With double sessions still a necessity in many grades, some

Spirit of Law

IT MAY BE within the letter of the law, but it is not within the spirit of the law for those holding government positions or having government influence to use their influence on behalf of people or corporations seeking government loans from R.F.C.

It is very possible that the man holding the position of head of the Democratic party could not be convicted for indicating to officials of the R.F.C. that he might have a hand in keeping them on the job, or naming someone for the job of director of R.F.C. What he did was undoubtedly legal, but it represented a lack of morality the people expect from those holding positions of public trust.

Had the same thing happened during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, Boyle would have continued on the job he held for just the few minutes it took the President to fire him. But we have degenerated morally since the days of Theodore Roosevelt and are doing now what was done during the days of Harding. But the Harding crew was not wise enough to violate only the spirit of the law. They violated the letter of the law, and were caught in the toils of justice.

Abraham Lincoln said "the republic cannot live half free and half slave." Today he would say, as others are saying, "the nation cannot live half legally honest, but half morally dishonest," and moral dishonesty should not be countenanced.

There can be no place in American public life for either those who exert influence through holding places of power, or for those who demonstrate that they are susceptible to influence, whether that influence be paid for in the form of deepfreeze units, mink coats, free hotel bills, free vacations, or as attorney fees. All such rewards are but bribes, and both the bribe-taker, and the bribe-giver should be summarily discharged from any form of government service. Our public officials must be both legally and morally honest, whether they be cabinet officers or clerks.

To the men folks of the nation it seems hardly fair that they should have to pay the present exorbitant charges of the barbers and at the same time must collectively pay for the "prettying up" of the members of the United States senate. But the recent action of the senate forces them to do just that.

The senators will get their hair cuts, their shampoos, their shaves, and all the other items the barbers can suggest as something needed at public expense. The tickets will be handed to the tax payers.

Each hair cut will be the same $1 charge whether the senator be a baldy, or one having a luxuriant crop. The tax paying public will pay the $1, plus the charges for all the extras. The cost to the people for the tonsorial needs of the senators will be more than $1300 more for this year than for last. But the senators will pay their own tips, if any.

At about the time of the starting of the Korean war, living costs were going up faster than at any time since then. At that time, congress gave the President control legislation which he then said he did not want, did not need and would not use. Now the President is condemning congress for not giving him the control legislation he did not want, and did not use, and now living costs are leveling off at about the point they reached at the start of the Korean war. Congress feels the President is inconsistent.

Instead of raising the postage rates, which the people must pay, congress might well cut out better than three billions of cost for the propaganda services that are of no benefit to any one unless it be the heads of departments who wish to justify their existence. It does not present factual information regarding the operations of government. Because it is propaganda, not factual, reputable publications will not use it. The some 30,000 people employed in its production and distribution, costing more than three billions a year, is an entirely unwarranted expense. Saving that three billion would represent a real economy that would mean far more than the adding of a few hundred millions in an increase in postage rates.

The socialistic sword hangs over our head. Will the people vote out the threat at the 1952 election?

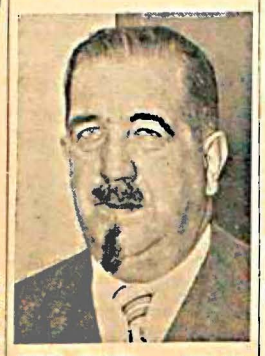
One of the sights I see each day from the vantage point of the sun porch of my California home are the wrecking wagons hauling in the automobiles whose drivers were in too much of a hurry. Now the drivers are walking or in the hospital or the cemetery as a penalty for breaking the traffic laws. Many of the cars were driven by children who, as drivers, were breaking the traffic laws. Speed is the demon of the highways, paid for with broken lives and broken cars.

BLASTS CONGRESS . . . Philip Murray, president of the CIO, addresses the opening session of that organization in New York, saying that "America deserves a better congress than it had this year and 1952 is the year to change it." Murray was re-elected CIO president.



NOBEL WINNER . . . Leon Jouhaux, French trade union leader, was awarded the Nobel peace prize for 1951. He has been chairman of the international council of the united Europe movement since 1949. The amount of the cash award is $32,500.

"HOME COMING QUEEN" . . . Miss Clarice C. Davis, 20, a Negro co-ed, was elected "home coming queen" at the University of Illinois. Miss Davis, first Negro ever to be chosen for this honor in the western conference, won over 16 finalists.

FOOTBALL CASUALTY . . . Ronnie Nanini, Fremont, Calif., high school football star, died in hospital several hours after being hurt in a game between Oakland and Fremont high schools. At first, he was believed not to be seriously injured.

PROF ARRESTED . . . Dr. Gwynne Nettler, professor of sociology at Santa Barbara, Calif., college, is charged with having stolen furnishings from fashionable homes, including a large amount of rugs. Loot was found in his home.

RISES FROM DEAD . . . Mrs. Theresa Butler, 60, San Francisco, was pronounced dead after she was found by a maid in a tub of water. But she came to life as she was being carried into the morgue. An examining doctor estimated she had been dead for 10 hours. She was rushed to hospital where her condition was called critical. Police said there was suspicion of an overdose of sedatives. Photo shows attendant and nurse caring for Mrs. Butler at emergency hospital.

SCRATCH ONE SNIPER . . . Marines tighten a ring of death on a sniper located in a thatch-roofed hut in Korea. One marine is peering through the rear entrance while his comrades cover the front. Body of sniper lies with feet across the door sill. But some of his Communist buddies may still lurk in the dark interior. This is a sample of the kind of fighting that U.N. forces have had to face in Korea.

TEACHER TAKES ADVICE . . . Yankee shortstop Phil Rizzuto gets some advice from elder statesman Bernard Baruch at opening class of American baseball academy in New York. Rizzuto heads a staff of nine major league baseball stars who are instructing 1,200 boys between ages of 10 and 18 in daily classes until Feb. 15. The academy's prime purpose is not to teach baseball, but, through association of the boys with their idols, teach them fair play and sportsmanship.

DRAMATIC RESCUE . . . This is one of the first actual rescue photos taken when the U. S. transport General Hersey collided with the Argentine liner Maipu, sinking the latter vessel. None of the 3,000 U. S. soldiers on the transport were injured and the 80 passengers and 188 crew members aboard the liner were all rescued. A lifeboat, loaded with passengers, stands by as the liner sinks beneath the fog-shrouded North Sea.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY...DREW PEARSON

Babe-in-the-Woods

REPUBLICANS - for - Eisenhower heaved a big sigh of relief when their proposed candidate finally climbed on his plane and flew back to Paris. During the short time he was here, they estimated that their man had helped Senator Taft pick up about 100 additional delegates for the GOP nomination.

"He may be a great general," mourned one Republican active in the Eisenhower-for-President organization, "but he certainly is a babe-in-the-woods when it comes to politics."

What caused Eisenhower supporters to tear their hair was the way their man cut the ground out from under his chief backer with the statement that he hadn't heard from Sen. James Duff of Pennsylvania "directly or indirectly for a long, long time."

In the first place this was not true. For, earlier in the day, Ike's own aide, Lt. Col. Robert L. Schulz, had phoned Senator Duff from Louisville. He phoned around Sunday noon, and Eisenhower's disclaimer to the press was Sunday afternoon.

Second, word was sent to Senator Duff two weeks before Eisenhower arrived that he was coming and to keep November 4, 5 and 6 open.

Third and more important, Duff had been waging a steady though quiet campaign to organize district leaders throughout the country and take delegates away from Taft. Last month, for instance, he made two speeches in North Carolina urging Eisenhower for President. Immediately following the two speeches, John Gordon Bennett, scion of the famed New York Herald editor, went to North Carolina, began the actual work of pledging delegates.

Anguished Phone Calls

Most essential part of the Bennett-Duff sales talk, naturally, had to be that Eisenhower was a Republican, had given definite assurances that he would be a candidate, and would not leave his followers out on a limb. Without such assurances, no local politician wants to deal.

Imagine their horrified surprise, therefore, when local leaders read in the press that Eisenhower hadn't heard from Senator Duff "directly or indirectly for a long, long time."

Immediately long-distance phone calls began coming in to Eisenhower lieutenants from various parts of the country.

"You said Jim Duff was masterminding the general's campaign," protested one North Carolina Republican. "How can he mastermind the campaign when he hasn't even been in touch with him? You said Duff had assurances Ike would run. But Ike says he hasn't heard from him.

"In view of that," continued the irate North Carolinian, "we're getting in touch with Dave Ingalls (Taft's campaign manager) as fast as we can. We've got to protect ourselves."

What the North Carolinian had in mind was the way Eisenhower rebuffed various Democrats who wanted to draft him in 1948, making them too late to catch the Truman bandwagon. Truman has never forgiven Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois, Jimmy Roosevelt, Sen. Olin Johnston of South Carolina and others who plumped for Ike. Republicans know this, and figure Taft might be just as vindictive as Truman.

Those are some of the sordid but essential ABC's of politics which Eisenhower doesn't understand, but will have to learn.

Behind the Peace

Besides the genuine desire for peace, two key factors are behind the American disarmament proposals in Paris:

1. A report from U.S. Ambassador Allan Kirk, just returned from Moscow, that both Stalin and the politburo are suffering a case of war jitters, think the U.S.A. is ready for war, and that Russia should get the drop on us. Kirk warned that there is grave danger Russia may start war for this reason; therefore urged the President to be extremely careful about all public statements on Russia—at least until the war hysteria dies down.

2. The effective manner in which Russia has put across the idea that it is the real advocate of peace and that the United States is warmongering.

War on Piggy Bank

The Bureau of the Mint has privately declared war on that trusty receptacle of America's loose change, the piggy bank. It's all because of the shortage of pennies.

The government has something like 19,197,534,000 pennies outstanding and another 175,000,000 were minted during the month of October. However, there's still a big shortage, forcing many banks to ration their outlay of pennies.

Wouldn't Work

A woman complained to a friend that the walls of her new apartment were so thin that the neighbors on either side could hear everything she said.

"Oh, I think you could eliminate that trouble," the other replied. "Just hang some tapestries over your walls."

The woman considered the suggestion briefly, then shook her head.

"No, that wouldn't do," she replied. "Then we couldn't hear what they say."

The merchant who advertises in the Review is inviting the people of Lemon Grove to come into his store. He wants to meet the home people. Advertisers using other mediums to exclusion of the home paper apparently are not interested in their neighbors. Lemon Grove people trading at home will keep the local merchants so busy they will not be eyeing greener fields afar. The fable of the dog and the bone applies to the man who is always looking for greener fields while overlooking the potentials of his own immediate locality.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

California's white - thatched, sixty-ish Governor Earl Warren has set political observers across the Nation speculating the past fortnight on his intentions concerning the presidency.

While many of the Governor's California friends, accepting his announcement of candidacy at word value, figure he will make a vigorous campaign for the Nation's prize political plum, Eastern and mid-Western observers are inclined to discount him as a serious candidate because of his renewed espousal of compulsory health insurance as expressed a few days before he announced for the presidency.

Even the critics of California's Governor admit he is a very shrewd politician; and the feeling expressed in political circles is that he is far too shrewd to espouse compulsory health insurance nationally if he were a serious contender. The politicos, to substantiate their theory, point out that every other GOP contender of any serious moment is commited against compulsory health insurance and against the other planks of big government like the Brannan Farm Plan, public power and the rest.

Even General Eisenhower, it is brought out, has spoken against government medicine—one of the few domestic issues on which he has taken a stand.

Earl Warren, the politicians muse, knowing how unpopular these issues are and that the GOP will make its chief attack on the Democrats on the basis of their espousal of a huge, all-powerful Federal Government—is more intent on building himself for another gubernatorial term or maneuvering himself into a strong trading position at the GOP presidential convention.

In this regard, it has long been felt that one of Governor Warren's chief ambitions is to finish his public career as United State Attorney General.

Thus Eastern and mid-Western observers speculate that California's Governor will keep his lightning rod up while actually in the fray as California's "favorite son" candidate. For position, the politicos estimate, Governor Warren will play it as the Republican candidate the furthest to the left— the closest to the Democrats. In this manner, if lightning hits the rod, fine; if not, the Governor is in a strong position in California.

The line of reasoning is that the California Republican delegation, at Chicago, next July, will swing behind one of the major contenders on the second or third ballot so that the State will have a trading position within the GOP Councils. Of course, if the California delegation doesn't swing to the right man at the right time, California seekers of Federal appointments in the event of GOP victory in '52 will get short-shrift—the Golden State figuratively will be lucky to be invited to sit on the back porch when national politics and policies are on the agenda.

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT

by JAMES DORAIS

The renowned case of Dr. Gwynne Nettler, professor of sociology at the University of California in Santa Barbara, who confessed last week to an extra-curricular career in burglary, may shed badly needed light on the controversial and puzzling issue of academic freedom in the halls of higher learning.

It is doubtful that many schoolteachers, in the elementary grades or in high schools, are greatly concerned with the issue. To them, academic freedom is more likely to mean merely the freedom to pursue, at modest pay, the task of drilling holes in an appalling number of thick young skulls in which to pour the rudiments of arithmetic, spelling, chemistry and basketball.

But in university circles, where teachers are professors and acknowledged experts in their fie'ds, the issue it taken very seriously. When the loyalty oath dispute raged at its fiercest, the phrase "academic freedom" appeared at least once in every paragraph written on the subject. Professors resigned their positions over the issue. Some UC alumni even feared that controversy over the issue would wreck the University, although it still is standing, and at last reports had a considerable enrollment and even a football team.

But while all the furor was entertaining to the general public, no one ever seemed to come along with a satisfactory explanation of just what academic freedom is. And here, by way of example, is where Dr. Nettler's case may prove to be helpful.

Dr. Nettler, too was an expert. Quite recently he was elected a fellow of the division of personality and social psychology of the American Psychological Association. Just prior to his arrest he was lecturing to his Santa Barbara students on "crime and punishment". Either word, he told the students, is hard to define. And he commented: "Almost every person commits several crimes each week."

The professor was fired by the university—not for teaching 19-year olds the subversive doctrine that right is practically indistinguishable from wrong, but because his own practicable application of that doctrine landed him in the can. There is an important distinction there—one that the professor's colleagues who are concerned with the issue of academic freedom should find vastly comforting. For it wasn't the professor's freedom to teach as he felt that was curtailed, but just his personal freedom to break and enter other people's homes.

The principle of academic freedom was unimpaired by the incident. And the case suggests an understandable definition at last:

Academic freedom — the inalienable right of a university professor to teach and advocate, without restraint from authority and at taxpayers' expense, any theory or doctrine in which he happens to believe.

Escondido Man Out for Congress

Declaring it high time that business methods and honest Americanism should be injected into government, Oscar E. Knappe, of Escondido, operator-manager of the Valley Oil company and a native of San Diego county, has entered the race for congress. Knappe announced here this week he will seek the seat in the newly-formed 28th congressional district which includes both Orange county and the northern section of San Diego county.

Knappe, who is president of the Escondido Kiwanis club, said that he has been a registered Republican since he became of voting age, but that he plans to cross-file. "This is no time for party labels to help or hinder any candidate," Knappe said. He invited support of both Democrats and Republicans, as well as independent voters.

Knappe, who a few years ago was Orange county and San Diego county representative at the Washington conference of Small Business Organizations, said he believes congressmen today should divide their time equally between the problems of their own localities and those of the country as a whole. "Only in this way can real American policy be formed," he said.

Knappe, who was born in San Diego February 19, 1909, came to Escondido in 1911 and has been active in civic affairs since then. He is a member of the Lutheran board for the Home for the Aged in San Diego county. He was educated in Escondido schools and for a time worked in the district attorney's office and the office of the U. S. marshall. He is married and the father of three daughters, Arlene, Phyllis and Joyce.

Sisters of Knappe are Mrs. Fred Rector, 8532 Chevy Chase Drive, La Mesa, wife of Fred Rector, former La Mesa city councilman, also Mrs. Frieda Ralston, 8770 La Mar Street, Spring Valley, member of coordinating council, wife of Fred Ralston.

BETTER HEALTH for all

The Annual Chest X-ray

More and more people throughout the country are getting into the habit of a chest X-ray at least once a year to find out whether or not there are signs of tuberculosis in their lungs.

A chest X-ray is one of the first steps in searching out this communicable disease. Although early tuberculosis has no apparent symptoms, indications of even early disease will usually show up on the X-ray.

People who realize "one chest X-ray is not enough" keep a year-to-year check on the health of their lungs. For tuberculosis can strike at any time. A favorable report on a chest X-ray now is no guarantee that tuberculosis will not develop in the future.

Tuberculosis is caused by germs called tubercle bacilli which are passed on by those who have an active - a contagious - case of the disease to those who are well. There is no way of knowing just when tuberculosis may attack.

Obviously, one way to avoid tuberculosis is by keeping away from those who have the disease in an active stage. But we cannot always be certain that we are not in contact with TB. For people can look and feel well and still be suffering from tuberculosis, since the disease has no obvious symptoms in an early stage. Hense a person can unknowingly be getting a daily bombardment of tubercle bacilli within his own family circle or from relatives and friends with whom he associates.

That is why doctors and tuberculosis associations urge every adult 15 years of age and over to form the habit of getting a chest X-ray at least once a year. If tuberculosis should develop, a person then has the best chance of having his disease found early, when it is easiest to cure.

Tuberculosis can be cured, but it is more difficult to cure when it is found in an advanced stage.

If there is one enterprise on earth that the quitter should leave alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk . . . it pulls. It pulls gently at first but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power.—John Wanamaker.

Highlanders, Mariners In Hoop Contest

The Helix and Mar Vista High School basketball squads meet tomorrow, (Friday,) night at Grossmont Gym in a non-league game. The Class B contest is set at 7 p. m. and the varsity will be at 8:30.

On November 20, the Highlanders went on a scoring spree and routed Julian, 56-39. Paced by Noel Mickelson and Chuck Lehmkuhl, who between them accounted for 39 points, the Highlanders played aggressive ball, but showed rough spots that could use some smoothing out.

The varsity will be favored to down the Mar Vista Mariners, but the Bees, who edged Julian's Bees by a mere 33-32 margin, will need a lot of work and improvement to keep their winning ways up. Junior Ray West, who tallied for 14 points, carried most of the load against the Julian lightweights.

All in all, those who travel to Grossmont Gym tomorrow night are in store for a top-notch basketball treat.

Aztecs End Best Season

Two insect parasites of the western grapeleaf skeletonizer is found on wild grapes in San Diego county. Owen J. Smith, experiment station specialist, is in charge of the biological control project to reduce the destructiveness of the skeletonizer as a pest of cultivated grapes.

The parasites, a wasp and a fly, were collected in Arizona where the skeletonizer is found on cultivated grapes. They are known to be effective in the control of the pest in that state.

The wasp and fly are being raised at La Mesa in the infected area. Some have been released but it is too early to know how effectively they will control the skeletonizer in California.

children today are arriving at school and being dismissed during the peak hours of rush traffic. Highways at 8:00 a. m. and at 4:30 to 5:00 p. m. are crowded with fast moving vehicles, and many pupils now riding would be walking along these arteries of traffic. These months of short daylight hours present the added problem of young students, who attend school in the afternoon, traveling homeward after dusk when visibility is poor both for the drivers and the pedestrians.

When the new classrooms are opened in various parts of the school district, these aforementioned problems will be minimized. In many cases, all-day sessions, with later hours for a. m. arrival and earlier hours for p. m. dismissal, will permit safer traveling, and a large percentage of those students who now ride the bus will be within convenient walking distance of school.

At all times the safety factor is given full consideration. The School Safety Patrol is being enlarged for traffic control at dangerous crosswalks, and the children are receiving more and more safety instruction from teachers and principals.

Lemon Grove School News

Lemon Grove School

All sixth graders at the Lemon Grove Intermediate School and many of the seventh and eighth graders were privileged to see the film "Alaska's Silver Millions," a story of the salmon industry, last week when the picture was made available to the school by the American Can Company.

New officers for Mr. Purves' sixth grade class for the month of December are Lewis Griggs, president; Richard Beers, vice president; Mary Telles, secretary; Earldene Ward and Mary Lou Monette, room monitors.

In Mrs. Ho'mquist's sixth grade room, a committee, Byron Cannon, Ernest Chambers, and Oliver Hodapp, have constructed a model for the classroom of the Great Lakes and the St Lawrence waterway. The students are now studying Canada, our neighbor to the north.

The class will present many Christmas poems using choric verse for the holiday program.

Many class members are finishing their entries for the student council soap carving contest and winners will be announced soon.

The sixth grade classes of the Intermediate School are taking advantage of the Lemon Grove Library by visiting it during the noon hour following the lunch period. Those students with special permits to leave the school grounds are finding books for leisure reading and for classroom reports with the able assistance of Mrs. Ruth Peddler, librarian.

Mrs. Grace Burks, Lemon Grove District representative to the County Curriculum Planning Commission, has prepared a detailed report of the recent Camp Cuyamaca two-day meeting of the committee. The 50 members who attended the sessions were fortunate in hearing an address by Dr. Clarence Fielstra, Assistant Dean, School of Education, at UCLA, and consultant to the committee.

An art work shop was held in the Lemon Grove School cafeteria from 8:00 a. m. to 12:00 noon on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week. The Binney and Smith Company, art supply distributors, provided an instructor for the three day conference for elementary teachers, and the company also provided all materials used at no cost to the district. The uses of all art materials were explained and demonstrated for all grade levels. Teachers from all Lemon Grove schools, as well as teachers from La Mesa and other surrounding districts, attended.

A district-wide faculty meeting of all Lemon Grove Schools will be held at 7:30 in the new kindergarten room of Golden Avenue School tonight, Thursday. The agenda for the evening will include the discussion of the district's four point program being emphasized this year, the report cards to be adopted by the schools, the suggested standards for classroom equipment and audio-visual equipment, and student transportation safety, including both those pupils who walk to school and those who travel by bus. Supt. B. L. Netzley will be general chairman for the evening.

S. K. Solleder of the Lemon Grove Schools attended a meeting of the library committee of the County Curriculum Planning Committee at the Schools Service Center in San Diego on Monday evening. The group discussed and evaluated the present County School Library and its services to the many county elementary schools.

On Tuesday of this week students of the seventh and eighth grade at the Lemon Grove Intermediate School had individual pictures taken. These will be available to the students, it is hoped, before the Christmas vacation.

GROSSMONT

Grossmont High School will present it 23rd annual Christmas Pageant in the Grossmont Auditorium on December 12, 13, 14 at 8:00 p. m.

First presented in 1928, the Pageant is an original production developed by Grossmont teachers and has become a traditional Christmas gift to the community. The presentation combines the efforts of a large group of faculty and more than 300 students and nearly every school department contributes something to the finished product.

General Director is Raymond Kniss, dramatics instructor. Other faculty directors include Eva Quicksall, Merle Donohue, Harold Lutz, Alda Kirk, Jean Creelman, Shirley Anderson, Dorothy Runde, John Cornelius, Charles Daggs, May Jenkins and many others. The student cast including the orchestra, the choir, members of drama and speech classes have not yet been chosen.

There is no charge for admission, but, because of limited seating capacity, admission is by ticket-invitation. Only 1400 tickets will be available for each day at Grossmont on December 3 to 7 from 12 to 4 p. m. and 6 to 9:30 p. m.

St. John of the Cross School News

"Virgin of Guadalupe"

The full length movie, that has been in such wide demand, "Virgin of Guadalupe," will be given two showings Sunday December 9, in the auditorium of St. John of tthe Cross Church at 6:15 and 8:15 p. m. There is also an accompanying comedy for the children. The background for the film is the colorful Mexican surroundings of long ago. Proceeds from the two performances will go to the School Bus fund.

Brownies

The Brownies of St. John of the Cross have been working very hard on their Christmas projects. Troop 376, Mrs. Boltz, leader, with 12 girls, and Troop 70, Mrs. Palasik, leader, with 18 girls, have been making little Christmas gifts for their mothers. Troop 308, Mrs. Johanson, leader, with 25 girls, is making stuffed toys for less fortunate children to be distributed by Sister Superior of St. John of the Cross School.

Christmas Cards

Sunday will be final day for the ordering of Christmas cards. Orders will be taken and sample boxes sold after each Mass in the Vestibule of the St. John of the Cross Church.

N. C. C. W. Convention

The Convention of the National Council of Catholic Women of the San Diego Diocese was held in Imperial Valley, Wednesday. Delegates of St. John of the Cross Parish who attended were Mrs. Burney Bray and Mrs. Joseph Galen representing the Parent's Guild; Mrs. Eleanor Pollock, Mrs. Virginia Robles and Mrs. Marie Borlin representing the Altar Society.

Delegates attended 9 a. m. Mass at St. Mary's Church in El Centro, followed by the initial meeting in the Church auditorium.

The registration of delegates and the Convention meeting held in the De Anza Hotel, Calexico, was preceeded by luncheon. All five Deaneries of the San Diego Diocese were represented by delegates. Private buses were chartered for the convention by the delegates of the San Diego County Deanery.

Crime in America

Corruption of a Small Town: Case Study

So far in this series, the pattern suggested is that crime and contempt for the law is a big city operation. This is not necessarily so. The smaller cities and towns have it, too.

Sometimes, as our senate committee was to learn, crime in smaller places was conducted as a suburban, or branch, operation of the nearest big city gang. This was particularly true in the Chicago and New York areas. On the other hand, there also is the phenomenon of the wide-open small-town, free from big city gang influence and where the local operator—usually a single "string man"—is able to operate without paying any particular tribute to the law.

In many big cities, young people come into maturity with an attitude of contempt for the law, because they see and hear almost daily, that criminals, through alliances with conniving politicians and crooked law enforcement officers, are bigger than the law. It would be a frightful thing if this same disillusionment should spread to the small-town youngsters of America.

The committee touched briefly on one such case study in its questioning, both privately and in public hearings in Chicago, of a man named Thomas J. Cawley.

In a way, Cawley, a stocky, unabashed, monosyllabic witness, was a refreshing change from the procession of hoodlum witnesses whose carefully rehearsed refrain, "I refuse to answer on the ground it might tend to incriminate me," became so grating to our ears. He, at least, made no bones of the fact that Thomas J. Cawley was the undisputed gambling king of two small Illinois towns—LaSalle, population, 12,023, and Streator, population, 16,442. The two towns, both in LaSalle county, are about 27 miles apart.

I should like to quote simple and unadorned excerpts from the official record of the examination of this small-town gambler.

Cawley's first appearance was in executive (closed) session, October 18, 1950, at the U.S. Court house in Chicago.

Q. What is your business, Mr. Cawley? A. A cigar store operator.

Q. What other business do you have? A. I operate a farm and a book.

Q. Where do you operate your book? A. 621 First st., LaSalle, Ill.

Q. Is that the only book you operate? A. I operate one in Streator, Ill.

Q. Is it (the Streator operation) solely a book? A. Well, it is a gambling room, is what it is. We have dice.

Q. You also have gambling equipment? A. Yes.

Q. What type of games do you run? A. Dice.

Q. Roulette? A. Roulette, LaSalle, and that is all.

Cawley went on to say that he employs about 65 to 70 persons in LaSalle; this includes his restaurant, bar and cigar store employees, in addition to the gambling help.

Q. How long have you operated the book there? A. I imagine . . . around 15 years.

Q. Is that in LaSalle? A. In LaSalle; at Streator, I would say 10 years.

Q. Who is sheriff of that county? A. The sheriff now is Ryan.

Q. How long have you known him? A. I hardly know the man.

Q. Did you know Mike Welter? A. Yes, sir . . . He was sheriff three terms . . .

Q. Did you contribute to the campaign funds of any of the other Sheriff's? A. No, sir; only Mike Welter.

Q. How much did you contribute to his campaign? A. $500.

Q. Mike Welter knew what business you were in? A. I wouldn't know whether he would or not.

Q. What we want to get at is: How can you run wide open down there without the sheriff knowing about it and doing something about it? It is generally known, is it not, that you operate these places? A. That is right. I was born and raised there. I had a good friend, the mayor of the town, and he wouldn't let none of them politicians come into our city.

Q. He would not let any politicians come in? A. He wouldn't let them politicians come from the county into the city from LaSalle.

Q. He would not let the sheriff come in? A. That is right.

Q. So he is the one who let you keep on running; is that it? A. He never let me keep on running. He didn't do any more for me than he would for anybody else. Anybody can go down in that town right today and open up, and it doesn't cost them a 5-cent piece.

Q. The sheriff does not bother you. A. That is right.

Q. Do the people like it, you think? A. I think they do—90 per cent of them.

Q. What is the present Chief of Police's name? A. Eddie Kasprowicz, something like that.

Q. He knows what business you were in? A. Yes. Everybody in town knows what business I am in.

Q. Do you pay money for protection? A. No, sir.

Q. Never have paid any money? A. No. When I do, I will get out of business.

Q. Do you contribute any money to political parties? A. I might contribute to both parties a check . . . a hundred dollars here or a hundred dollars there; yes . . .

Q. That was to the political party, but to no particular individual? A. That is right.

Further questioning revealed that Cawley's business was a family enterprise of which he owned 52 per cent. His share of the net profits the previous year (1949) was approximately $67,000. He said his partners were a brother and two sisters; that they "absolutely" were not connected "with anyone from Chicago" or elsewhere, and that when they (the Chicago element) come in, I go out."

We next delved into Cawley's connections with the racing wire service. He was in that business, too, in both towns. His ticker service, which he bought from one of the Continental Press distributors, was cut off at LaSalle shortly before he testified but still was operating at Streator.

Q. You had never been raided? A. Yes; I was raided once . . . I have had one conviction.

Q. What was that? A. Well, running a gaming house.

Then, two months later, the committee had Mr. Cawley back in Chicago for examinations in open hearings. In the meantime we had read in the Chicago newspapers that, the day after he told us in executive session that he ran without interference, his place in LaSalle was shut down tight by order of the mayor. In Streator, the police chief was quoted as saying he had called at Cawley's Paddock club but found "nothing but punchboards and lucky bowls." But the following is what we heard from the still unruffled Cawley.

Q. Do you still have an establishment in both places (LaSalle and Streator)? A. That is correct.

Q. Are they still operating? A. That is right.

Q. Have they been down to speak of for any period of time in the last two or three months? A. Very little.

Q. Everything is going the same as usual? A. Yes.

Cawley went on to list, perfectly frankly, in response to questions, all the forms of gambling in which he was engaged. In addition to the horse books, he listed a baseball pool, punchboards, roulette and a small poker game. Slot machines had been out for some time.

Still curious as to how he got away with it, I picked up the questioning.

Q. How do you account for the fact that you can operate the way you can, Mr. Cawley? A. Well, it has been going on down there for 25 years.

Q. You said 90 per cent of the people like it? A. That is right. We had an election down there that proved that.

Q. Tell me about that? A. The sheriff—two sheriffs run, one runs on an anti-gambling ticket and the other fellow runs on an open ticket, and the fellow on the open ticket wins the election. Q. Don't you sell liquor in your places? A. . . . They took my liquor license away from me.

Q. And when did they take the liquor license away from you? A. After I got back from this meeting the last time. (Laughter in the hearing room.)

Q. But you still sell liquor? A. That is right.

Q. But it hasn't made any difference in your operation? A. No. No.

THE WHITE SHEIP

Capone's Brother is Justice of Peace

CHICAGO—A long-lost, almost forgotten brother of the late Al Capone has been located by government investigators, living the life of a peaceful, law-abiding citizen.

Assistant US attorney Lawrence Miller said the man is James Capone, 63 year old ex-town marshall and now a justice of the peace at Homer, Neb., where he is known as Richard J. Hart.

The information was disclosed as the first witness appeared before the grand jury investigating alleged income-tax evasion by another Capone brother, Ralph.

Hart was summoned before jury to explain why he holds title to Ralph's home near Merced, Wis. Hart reportedly was not in contact with the Capone family for 33 years. He left home at 16 to join a circus.

by GRANTLAND RICE

A New Star Reports

NEW YORK—It may be considered a piece of heresy to compare any modern back with Red Grange, Jim Thorpe, Ernie Nevers, Waller Eckersall and one or two more from the glory road of the past. But that is the way it happens to be at this date with a number of football experts in their rating of Dick Kazmaier.

Grantland Rice

Dick Kazmaier is the Princeton passer and runner who practically wrecked a good Cornell team, using both the turf and the air for this purpose.

But Kazmaier's fame doesn't stop with the game against the big red. He has been the shining star in most of Princeton's victories. There has been no game since Dick put on an orange and black jersey wherein he failed to star.

You might remember that Kazmaier, from Maumee, Ohio, was the sole surviving member from Princeton's brilliant offensive squad last fall. The other 10 regulars had left him, with younger talent coming on.

What happened in his Cornell test? Kazmaier completed 15 out of 17 passes for close to a .900 percentage. He picked up more than 230 yards with his right arm. His legs gathered in an additional 120 yards as a ball carrier.

He led an attack that scored 53 points against an unbeaten rival, rated Princeton's equal before the game.

In my opinion Kazmaier was probably the best back of 1950, considering his all-around value. As far back as 1888 and 1889 Princeton had a back known as Knowlton (Snake) Ames.

Princeton never had a better all-around back until Kazmaier came along. And it isn't a question now as to whether Kazmaier is the best back of 1951, which he undoubtedly is, but as to how he will be ranked with the best backs of football.

I doubt that anyone has had the amazing over-all running elusiveness of Grange and Thorpe. But Dick Kazmaier, a star runner on his own, is a much better passer than the redhead or the Indians in their prime.

Princeton's High Place

More than a few of us placed Princeton on a par with Tennessee or any other college squad last fall. The Tiger may have been even better.

His place today is equally high, although it is difficult to get many football writers away from the east to give an Ivy team much credit. Certainly Charlie Caldwell is again in the running as coach of the year.

Everyone knows Tennessee's all-around strength. But so far her schedule hasn't been too hot, if teams are to be ranked on what they have beaten.

Michigan State has had a flock of close and harrowing afternoons. Illinois has had a terrific year. In the matter of accomplishment it could be accorded first place.

The Illini have handled U.C.L.A., Wisconsin, Syracuse, Washington and Indiana. In Karras, the Blue and Orange has one of the year's star backs.

Georgia Tech had won six tough games. She was due for a letdown or a close call against a good Vanderbilt team.

Illinois and Georgia Tech have handled the rougher paths among the top teams, although Southern California must be given a high rating. And so must Stanford.

The game they are still talking about is Army's stand against a good Columbia team. The goal-line play of Red Blaik's high-spirited squad won't be soon forgotten. Certainly not by Columbia.

Where's The Defense?

Anyone who cares to look back over Saturday's scores might stand up and ask one simple question: "What's become of football's defense?"

Here may be found all the proof one needs of how far the defense has slipped back of the offense. Almost any team can score, even when it is outclassed. The main answer is this—the great improvement in forward passing—both concerning the passers and the receivers. Potent passers are plentiful across the nation.

There was a time when football only had two or three high-class passers. They were extremely scarce. Now they clog up the campuses. Kazmaier, Isbell, Agannis, Parilli, Price, Franz, Parks, Giel, Henrich and so many more you can hardly count 'em.

This is the only answer I can give you. S.M.U.'s passer piles up 20 or 27 points against a good Notre Dame team and scorns any form of running attack. That was Fred Benners. The Southwest is packed with riflemen who can hit a receiver in the eye at 40 yards.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

That Time Again

Yes, for all but the southern dwelling members of the angling fraternity, it's that time again—that dismal time when fishing gear must be put away until Spring comes again.

However, even in this depressing act there can be instilled a measure of prolongation of one's fishing fun, for the preparation of fishing tackle for the long winter months of storage can be engaging and interesting.

No angler worth the title, anyway, would consider storing his gear for the winter without putting it in as good shape as possible for the months of inactivity.

Re-Store Lines

And that means:

Taking lines from reels and storing them on large-diameter containers, hung where dry air may circulate through them.

Giving casting reels a good cleaning and greasing and seeing to it that automatics are oiled and greased where they should be and that single-action reels are well-cleaned and oiled.

The storing of reels in places where the cold will not cause grease or oil to congeal.

The wiping dry of all fly rods, inspection of ferrules and guides and taking care to store bamboo rods in places where there will not be a great variation in heat or cold at any one time. A very thin coating of fine oil on steel rods will protect the finish during the winter, but glass rods will need no care other than a good wiping-dry of the surfaces and an inspection of the guides and wrappings. Winter offers a good time to replace worn eyes and rework frayed wrappings.

Clean Tackle Box

Going through the tackle box and cleaning much-used plugs and refurbishing the metal hardware on same.

Checking one's fly book for worn or frayed flies and steaming wilted hackle to bring back its erectness.

Looking through upcoming catalogs of next season's tackle offerings—probably the brightest activity in the angler's indoor sports during the winter season.

Now You Know

During the summer months, fishermen, resort owners and others are occasionally disturbed to find dead fish floating in the water or washed up on shore on some of the many lakes in Wisconsin.

Although sometimes the mortality is small, at other times the dead fish are found in sufficient numbers to warrant a fishery investigation. The appearance of a fish mortality on a lake during July or August is aptly called "summer-kill."

In any discussion of the reasons behind a summer-kill on a lake, reference should be made to some of the factors that could be responsible. These are:

1. Natural mortality due to old age.
2. Natural mortality following spawning.
3. Parasites and diseases.
4. High temperature of the water.
5. Depletion of dissolved oxygen in the water.
6. Beaching of fish by storms and stranding of fish in pockets by rapid changes in the water level.
7. Shortage of the proper kind of food or consumption of improper kind of food.
8. Pollution.
9. Mechanical injuries due to (a) wave action (sand in gills, etc.); (b) commercial and state fishing gear (various types of nets); and (c) sport fishermen.
10. Detrimental effects of aquatic plant life.

About the only protective weapon the toad has is a milky fluid which they can give off and which is obnoxious to dogs.

Trolling for Perch

Both white and yellow perch often are caught by trolling. Most fishermen use fly rods or bait casting tackle, and they troll bright spinners with blades about an inch long, followed by a smelled hook baited with worms. The problem here, just as in fishing for perch by any other method, is to find the fish. They usually strike readily once the proper depth and the right location are determined.

Shallow trolling will help you find the fish.

Fishing Frogs

There are many anglers who do not like to fish frogs and won't do so because of the humane element involved, but for those who haven't any such scruples, here's a tip: When fishing frogs below the surface, they should be fished like minnows and a float may be used or not, as fits the desires of the angler.

There are two schools of thought on the frog as bait, but most will argue minnows are better.

More Light

The 100-watt incandescent lamp gives more light than two 50-watt lamps. Some of the energy in a lamp is lost by being conducted as heat through the gas in the bulb. With the higher wattage lamps, this loss is less in percentage, and thus more energy is used to make light.

The number of feet of exploration drilling in Canada in 1950 was 260,127, or equivalent to a total depth of fifty miles, compared with 140,309 feet in 1949, and 147,093 feet in 1948.

According to most recent authoritative information, during 1950 the total proved U.S. reserves of oil climbed from 28.586 billion barrels to 29.932 billion barrels, an increase during the year of 1.366 billion barrels. During the same period 2.17 billion barrels were produced.

13,000,000 Tons

By 1953 International Nickel expects, in capacity operation, to be hoisting about 13,000,000 tons of underground ore annually from its mines in Canada, which will be over double the amount of underground ore hoisted annually in the past by the company.

Refinishing Woodwork

QUESTION: Our home has fir woodwork. This was painted with white enamel when we purchased it twelve years ago. With two small children, the woodwork was left with their hand and finger prints. Several years ago I used an undercoat and finished it with light oak and stain varnish. The last few times I washed it, it cracked and peeled, leaving the old finish showing. Would it be possible for me to finish my woodwork myself?

ANSWER: When you varnished over the old finish you evidently did not prepare the surfaces sufficiently to take the new finish; therefore the finish failed. Before doing anything more, all the old finishes should be well scraped off down to the bare wood. If you can get hold of an electric portable sander, this would save time and work in removing the old finishes. Or you can use a varnish remover to soften the finish, and follow by scraping with scrapers, steel wool and rough cloths. Then clean the surfaces very thoroughly with turpentine, for every trace of remover must come off; if any is left on, it will work on the new finish. (Liquids are inflammable—be careful of fire.) For the finish that you like so well, bleach out the wood with a prepared wood bleach. Next, coat the surfaces with a liberal coat of white paste wood filler tinted with color-in-oil thinned with turpentine to the consistency of thick paint. (Or you may be able to buy a special "pickled" wood stain.) After fifteen minutes wipe off most of the coating across the grain with a coarse cloth. The remaining filler should be allowed to dry hard. Then smooth the wood with very fine sandpaper. Wipe off dust thoroughly and finish with white shellac or varnish.

At this Forum we give a complete course of instruction in the Catholic religion to non-Catholics and Catholics. Every encouragement is given to free and frank discussion of differences, objections and difficulties.
